WHEELING, W. VA., AUGUST 21, 1885.

Ohio.
Headly gets it. It was so sure a thing for him that it was hardly worth while to put the delegates to the inconvenience and expense of going to the convention.
Headly headed the programme, and those who didn't like Headly had to take him, for so it was written.

There is not a Democrat in Ohio who thinks that in a square fight between the two great parties his own has a chance.
The Third Party is the Democratic reliance. That organization must cut deep enough into the Republican ranks, or Headly will have no more show than a Republican nominee in Mississippi. There may be prohibitionists who do not look upon their party as a Democratic Aid Society, but any Democrat can undecide them if he will.

Ohio is a Republican State. The Interligence regards the chances as in favor of the Republicans this year, but a Republican victory cannot be regarded as beyond doubt until we are better able to measure the Third Party vote, and then we must be able to measure it small, or the Democracy will come out on top. Any observer can see that the Third Party makes of little account calculations based on former figures, except as the returns of last year may be taken as a guide.

Believing that the number of Republicans will be small who will consent to help the Democratic party by voting the Prohibition ticket, we are encouraged to look for a Republican victory.

Another Whack at the Tariff.
It is understood in Washington that the free trade Democrats, who follow the lead of Morrison and Carlisle, and the Randall Democrats have come to an understanding on the tariff question. They are to unite on a bill reducing the revenue $10,000,000. They will seek to secure this result by reducing the tariff. It may be supposed that the reduction will be largely along the line of so-called raw materials, to please a class of Democrats who are very tender on that subject.

If the theory of the free traders is true, that consumers would gladly buy more liberally of foreign products if the tariff were lower, then to cut down the tariff will stimulate purchases abroad and in all probability increase the revenue. If the revenue reformers were honest and earnest about reducing the revenue they would make sure of it by putting the tariff high enough to make a large reduction in importations. But this would add to the sum of protection, and they would cut off their right hands before they would do that.

The trouble with the country is, not that it is being ground to death by national taxation, but that in a time of world-wide depression the bars are low enough to let in the cheaper foreign products to compete with our own. Raw wool comes in, and manufactures of wool come in, to the disadvantage of our wool-growers and manufacturers of woolen fabrics. Iron and steel manufactures come in to the prejudice of miners and iron-workers, the communities in which they live, and the whole country. Everybody feels the drain. Yet there is talk about a lower tariff.

If the men who legislate for the country, instead of talking about a horizontal reduction of 20 percent would add 50 percent to every article that comes in competition with American industry, business would revive with an exultant bound. If we could have a guarantee of ten years of that tariff we would have such a decade as the country has never seen.
Every willing, able man and woman would have employment at good wages, and capital would be doing so well that there would be no strikes or lockouts.

If the tariff is to be revised let it be revised not down, but up. The one plan in the interest of American homes, the other of homes beyond the sea.

The Funeral Expenses.
The country will be fortunate if it escapes a scandal over General Grant's funeral expenses. The city of New York stands the cost of the funeral proper in that city, but the country will have to bear the humiliation if it turns out that the solemn ceremony was seized upon by jobbers to plunder the treasury of the city of New York.

The precise cost is not known, but $30,000 is mentioned as about the sum. If the bill foots up that amount the New York newspapers will be able to give their readers nothing more interesting than the items. There was a lavish use of everything, and the ward politician had to be plentifully supplied with carriages. But the purchasing power of $30,000 honestly expended is very great in these times, and the public will be slow to believe that so much money was honestly used.

It is a sad reflection that there are men who do not hesitate to rob the public by charging three prices for a coffin and four for a carriage. We have hardly ever been able to carry a Congressman without running up a scandalous bill.

Breakfast Budget.
Sam Jones, the revivalist, has no vice except tobacco chewing. He exclaims that, probably, on the ground that the gospel is for the chow as well as the Gentile.

A New York paper has discovered a most "unsual belle" in a whirling girl.
She should be taken a few miles out to sea and anchored alongside of a whirling buoy.

General Adam Biddle possesses the original of General Grant's dispatch to the Government at Washington announcing the surrender of Lee at Appomattox.
It was written by General Grant on the leaf of an old memorandum book.

An old married man thinks it is pretty lent practical printer, and once when his was competent to print the programmes required for a dance given by the officers, the Prince came forward and undertook the work.

It is a curious fact that wasps' nests often take fire, as is supposed, by the chemical action of the wax upon the matter of which the nest is composed. Many of the fires of unknown origin in haystacks and farm buildings may thus be accounted for.

A NOTABLE RESORT.
Salt Sulphur Springs, Monroe County—Personal Mention.
Correspondence of the Intelligence.

SALT SULPHUR SPRINGS, W. VA., August 17.—To attempt to draw a picture of this beautiful and picturesque place, would require a reader pen than mine. Located among the green hills of a rich and properous county, the grand old buildings and handsome lawns are well calculated to delight the eye and excite the admiration of the seeker after health or pleasure.
A few hours ride from Fort Spring Station on the C. & O. railroad through a beautiful, picturesque and fertile country, dotted with neat and prosperous looking farm houses, and on whose "topmost hills" the cattle roam for lustily beneath the spreading oaks, brings one to a resort where nature and art have been widely known for nearly a century. We took the ride in an old-fashioned rockaway stage coach—a reminder of bygone days, before the locomotive and parlor car superceded the more primitive mode of travel. Our John, a colored man who has held the reins for four years, entertained us by pointing out the various objects of interest—the highest elevation reached, by the way, is about 3,000 feet above sea level—which information he imparted between alternate jolts, as we bowed over the road, and the keen crack of the whip, as he urged his horses to greater speed. The ride is not to be dreaded, but is rather a novelty and pastime.

Salt Sulphur Springs was discovered in 1805. The land on which it is located, was entered by Ervin Benton in 1794.
The old cabin built and occupied by Benton, still stands and is still in use. It stands on a slight elevation a short distance from the hotel office. In "ye olden times," this place was patronized by many persons who were then famous, and whose memory still lives to perpetuate a reman-brance of the past. At Van Van Buren made a speech here in his time, and there lives in this community a man who stood under the sound of his voice. Alexander H. Stevens' name appears on the old proprietor, Col. Appleton, who the present day still resides here, and how he was fed, he replied that the accommodations were first class, and the cuisine unsurpassed, and added that he remembered with pleasure that they had had what he called "breakfast."

In 1801 and 1802, a garrison of confederate soldiers occupied the buildings, and the old account books kept at that time bear such entries as the following: "22 cents, 1801; 50 cents, 1802; $3.00; Confederate States, $45.00; one stranger, $2.00." All the entries were checked, which seems to indicate that the "needful" was furnished at any rate, whether it was greenbacks, bluebacks or silver.

The property is now owned by the Salt Sulphur Springs Company, and is managed by their Secretary and Treasurer, Colonel J. W. M. Appleton, who is irreproachable as a landlord and perfection as a proprietor. Colonel Appleton's family live here and occupy a stone building adjoining the hotel. His wife and two charming daughters add no little to the pleasure and entertainment of the guests.
The Salt Sulphur Springs Company purchased the large and excellent farm of about 700 acres, and have their own dairy and vegetable, much to the health and comfort of the guests. Situated on an elevation about 3,000 feet above sea level, the hotel building, the "stone building," where most of the guests are pleasantly quartered. The bath house is also within the limits of the lawn, and the sulphur and iodine springs are not more than a few minutes' walk from the office. Beautiful gravelled walks lead to the principal points of the lawn and to the bowling alley. In the main building are the dining room, parlor and ball room, and in the latter hall is fitted up a stage for private theatricals or chamber music.
The pastime is frequently indulged in by the guests. A stream of water winds graciously through the lawn, over which bridges have been built at several places, adding immensely to the picturesque beauty of the place.

The temperature is delightful, the air pure and bracing, and if real rest cannot be found here the fault lies in the person and not in the place. Outdoor amusements are ample for those who are so inclined. Fishing, hunting, boating, or simple wandering with book and hammock, may, enjoyed to the fullest extent. Saddle horses, buggies or carriages may also be had here, so that nothing is wanting to make this "just the place for a summer outing."

At present there is a large number of guests here. There is a superabundance of young ladies, comparatively speaking, and this has caused a shortage of young men. We are sure that such a thing is a "consummation devoutly to be wished," speaking from a "female standpoint."
Among the guests are the following:
